KERMIT THE ONLY ABSENTEE

Mr. and Mrs. H. Morgan Hill and Daughter Are in the White Mountains—Mrs. Charles Milbourn Joins Colony at Capon Springs—Assistant Secretary Bacon with His Family.

President Roosevelt completely abandoned official duties Saturday, and with his family, held a picnic on the shore of Long Island Sound, in the vicinity of Lloyd's Neck. The expedition got aloft early in the morning, some of the family utilizing the President's yacht, the Sylph, for transportation. The President, however, as is his custom on such occasions, preferred to row, and embarked with several children in a substantial row boat. The only member of the family not at home to enjoy the jaunt was Kermit, who is visiting the family of Col. W. A. Wadsworth, at Genesee, N. Y.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Morgan Hill and Miss Diane Morgan Hill, of this city, are at the Mount Washington Hotel, in the White Mountains of New Hampshire, where they will remain until their departure for Europe in August.

A very attractive addition to the younger married set at Capon Springs, W. Va., is Mrs. Charles Milbourn, of this city, who, with her two children, arrived recently, to be joined later by Mr. Milbourn. As Miss St. Clare Pilger, of South Carolina, Mrs. Milbourn was one of the leading belles of Capon for several seasons prior to her marriage a few years ago.

The Assistant Secretary of State, Mr. Robert Bacon, who is acting Secretary, spent the week-end with his family at their summer place, Westbury, Long Island.

The Assistant Secretary of the Navy, Mr. Truman H. Newberry, who is also acting Secretary, spent the week-end with Mrs. Newberry and their family at Watch Hill, R. I.

The headquarters of the Swiss Legation will be moved to Lake George the middle of this week. He will return to Washington to-morrow or Wednesday, and will go immediately to Lake George. The headquarters of the legation will be at Sagamore Hotel.

Prince Koudacheff, the first secretary of the Russian Embassy, will not join the embassy staff at Magnolia until August.

Mr. Kroupenski, legal attache of the Russian Embassy, has engaged a suite of rooms at "The Oaks" for the season. The cottage is not far distant from that of the Russian Ambassador and the Baroness Rosen.

GIRL'S WEDDING TO STAND.

Uncle of Philadelphia Will Does Not Think the Pope Will Act.

Philadelphia, July 7.—Relatives in this city of Mrs. Marion Wilcox Dougherty Gobel, whose wedding in London to "Baron" Richard Alexander Gobel, of Prague, has caused some scandal and indelicacy in American colonies in England, and on the continent, do not credit the report that Pope Pius X. has been asked to annul the marriage of the seventeen-year-old Philadelphia.

"It appears to me that the report is ridiculous on its face," said James M. Wilcox, vice president of the Philadelphia Savings Fund Society, and uncle of the bride.

"The Pope does not annul marriages performed, as this appears to have been, by a Catholic priest, and in which the contracting parties are Catholics. However, I have not heard from my sister, nor from my brother-in-law, and must wait for some information before I can form an opinion intelligently."

The youth of the bride, which, in the earlier reports of the disagreement, was assigned as the cause upon which annulment was asked, is not considered a bar by lay and clerical authorities on Roman Catholic ecclesiastical law.

UNVEIL SCHILLER MONUMENT.

St. Paul, July 7.—The Schiller monument at Coma Park was unveiled at 2 o'clock this afternoon by Miss Irma Schaeffer before a gathering of 6,000 people. The monument is from the art studio of Prof. M. Pascher, of Berlin, and the design was approved by Artist Carl Marx, who declares the statue to be one of the great works of art in America.

The monument is the gift of the German singing societies of St. Paul to the city. It cost $6,000 and stands in a prominent place in the park.

FOUR GRANDMOTHERS THERE.

Abundance of Relatives Take Active Part in This Marriage.

Beaver Falls, Pa., July 7.—It isn't often that a pair enjoys the attendance of four of their own grandmothers at their wedding, but this was the happy lot of William A. Wehr and Mary A. Cole, who were married in Burlington.

The maternal and paternal grandmothers of both the bridegroom and the bride were in attendance, and each of the old women took a keen interest in the marriage itself, at which two ministers officiated.

Mr. Wehr is superintendent of the Phoenix Glass Company, at Rochester.

CADET AYRES UPHELD

West Point Comrades Back Up Youth "On Area."

LOSES SUMMER FURLOUGH

Innocent Cause of Mother's Exile from United States Military Academy Punished for Engaging in a Fight—"Apron Strings" Idea Seems to Be Lacking in This Case.

New York, July 7.—One of the sights at West Point is Cadet Fairfax Ayres "on the area." This cadet, now in his third year, is the innocent cause of the banishment of his mother, Mrs. Charles G. Ayres, from the reservation occupied by the United States Military Academy.

Being "on the area" means that for a certain number of days, at certain hours, the cadet must patrol in guard equipment as a sign that he is paying a penalty for misdeeds.

This is Fairfax Ayres' second time "on the area," and his offense was fighting. The standard of conduct among the cadets requires the individual to fight with his fists under certain provocations. The embryo officer who would refuse one of these fists, which are forbidden by discipline, but are winked at by authority, would be shunned as a molly-coddle.

Such fights are not arranged haphazard. The "man" provoked is not at another's judgment in his own case. His fellows must approve, or the challenge is not sent. That is presumably what was done in the Ayres-Minar fight.

Paying Penalty Alone.

The Fairfax Ayres-H. E. Minar scrap was discovered and both cadets were sentenced to periods "on the area." Minar, being a second-year man, went away on his furlough, or vacation. He will pay his debt of punishment, or whatever remains of it, on his return to the Academy. Ayres, having no furlough this year, is paying the penalty alone.

That would not be complained of by any cadet, in ordinary circumstances. But in Ayres' case the circumstances are unusual. Ayres had the misfortune to get a sentence on the area last year just before his furlough, long looked for, was due.

A cadet at West Point serves four years, lacking the fourth summer. At the end of his second year he is permitted to leave for two months and three days. It is said by cadets to be unheard of for a cadet to be deprived of any of this brief visit home unless for the gravest reasons. It is the only relaxation of his kind from stern and pressing discipline, the only break in the four years' training for the coveted commission in the army.

Losses Chance of Promotion.

Last year Ayres was guilty of speaking to another cadet in the ranks. Technically this is a slight offense. In Ayres' case it was regarded as constructive hazing. The commandant of cadets, Lieut. Col. Howze, gave him a severe sentence—to lose a month of his furlough and to a long detail of punishment "on the area." The sentence of loss of half his furlough hurt the young man most, of course. Another pang was the loss of his chance to win one of the honors in the corps. It had been recommended by the cadet captains that Ayres be made first sergeant of his class. This recommendation was "turned down."

Mrs. Ayres, his mother, arrived at West Point for the commencement festivities in June, and found Ayres under this sentence. An "army woman," she felt that she was being discriminated against. All the cadets deny that Ayres is the kind of a fellow to go to his mother whimpering and begging her to get him out of trouble. They say he is the kind of fellow who "takes his medicine." Whatever his mother did was without Cadet Ayres' suggestion and with his disapproval.

Mother Makes Complaint.

Mrs. Ayres, nevertheless, went to friends of hers on the board of visitors and said that for some reason her son had been discriminated against. Gen. Horace Porter, Senator "Joe" Blackburn, Gen. Chaffee, and Col. Wiley and Johnston, of that board, made personal inquiry among the cadets, and then suggested that the punishment of Cadet Ayres be remitted in part as too severe for the offense. The board had no authority to do more than suggest. The suggestion was disregarded. The decision was "up to" the superintendent and commandant of cadets. Ayres lost the month of his furlough, and did his tour and lost his "make"—his chance to be a leader for him and cause trouble besides to some of us.

The board of visitors found that Ayres' offense was this: As the cadet battalion was marching off the parade grounds he noticed that Cadet Lyman, of Hawaii, "plebe" or first year man, was on the wrong side of the column. Ayres said in a low voice: "Mister, haven't you been here long enough to know which side of the column you belong on?" The "plebe" answered mildly he thought they said "kidd left."

Snub Causes Trouble.

"You thought" growled second year man Ayres. "I don't want to know what you thought."

The language was a survival of the old days when second-year men picked upon "plebes" from fall to summer, all the time. There are many experienced officers who defend the custom, but it is now forbidden. The tactical officer heard just enough of this conversation to guess its nature. Cadet Ayres was obliged to answer questions which convicted him. That is also a part of the new system at West Point.

Ayres' classmates were indignant over the severity of his punishment for this offense. It is five demerits or ten confinements to quarters for this," said one of his classmates last week. "We thought Ayres would get no more. We had a class meeting and proposed a certain demonstration of our feelings. Ayres said if we did that it would make it harder for him and cause trouble besides to some of us."

Mrs. Ayres' Expulsion.

Mrs. Ayres' resentment of what she regarded as the unjust treatment of her son was one of the causes of her exclusion from West Point. The real cause was her denial to Superintendent Scott, Commandant Howze, and Capt. Oliver that she had inspired newspaper reports about Howze's famous order on Easter Day, for girls whom cadets had laid overcoats to return them forthwith. The cadets regarded that order as ungentle and humiliating to them and their girl friends and relatives.

Mrs. Ayres' daughter, Cadet Ayres' sister, Emily, refused to give up the coat she had on, defying Col. Howze's order. On that incident arose the letters to the Adjutant General.

CAST THEIR TROUBLES ASIDE

Law and Order League Wards Enjoy Themselves.

Celebrate Inauguration of Second Year's Work of Organization and Make Reports.

Forgetting their troubles and the fact that they had ever been in the custody of the law for little acts of mischief, 200 boys and girls—probationers of the Law and Order League—gathered on the large lawn of the Juvenile Court yesterday afternoon and enjoyed themselves as they had not for many a day. All of the youngsters, the little fellows and the larger ones, were happy. The occasion was in celebration of the inauguration of the second year's work of the organization, the membership of which is composed entirely of the wards of the court, with the officials of the tribunal as its officers.

During the last year, from July, 1906, to July 1, 1907, twelve meetings were held, one each month, with an average attendance of nearly 250 probationers at each gathering. Since the court was established 2,500 children have been taken before Judge De Lacy and listened to his words of fatherly advice.

The exercises yesterday were on the lawn, where the little ones congregated and showed by their presence at the meeting that their conduct had been improved by the work of the officers, and that each and every one of them was interested in the entertainment that had been arranged for their special benefit. Rev. Zed H. Copp, chief probation officer, began the ceremonies, and during his remarks he congratulated the members of the league upon their particularly neat appearance. Every one of them looked as neat as a pin.

The department of the little folk was also mentioned by the chief, and this, too, in the most complimentary terms. Dr. Copp urged the probationers to hold steadfast to their promises made upon the day of their probation, and promised that if they did they surely would be rewarded in the end for being good.

"The world will reward and will admire every boy who grows into manhood and makes an honest, hard-working citizen," he said. "No matter how humble his calling, whether he is a great man or a laborer, the world pays daily tribute to the man who is honest and industrious. Honesty pays. Industry is better than a life of ease. It is easier to lead a life of earnestness and industry than it is to be an underdog in the crowd. The life of the laborer and the dishonest man is the hardest and the most uncomfortable in the world."

Judge De Lacy also talked to the little men and the little women on good citizenship and the methods of procedure to attain such a position in life. At the conclusion of the judge's remarks each one of the young members went forward and made his regular monthly report to Mrs. Gertrude B. Darwin, the assistant probation officer. The attendance of each probationer, which is the pride of each of them, was properly recorded on the little green card of the Law and Order League.

Among the guests at the exercises were J. Fred Courand, of Baltimore; Mrs. Jessie B. Acker, Col. A. S. Wilder, Capt. F. C. Rougeon, and Gen. Andrew S. Burt.

GET MARRIED ON A DARE.

Six Plebeians Flee Across the Ohio Line from Pittsburgh.

Pittsburgh, July 7.—"Some one dared us to get married, and none of us would take a dare, so here we are," said six young men who fled from Pittsburgh to escape a punishment for being "plebeians" at West Point. They had started out to that place as six separate
